

IHC Honored with Champion Award for Educational Support

IHC Construction is pleased to be honored with the 2008 Champion of Economic Education Award bestowed by the Illinois Council on Economic Education (ICEE). The Champion Award is presented to an organization that has provided financial support for ICEE programs for 30 years. IHC is proud to be one of ten firms to receive this distinction.

Accepting the Champion Award from Governing Board Chair Joe Guinan and ICEE President Joanne Dempsey was IHC Director of Business Development, Brian Fuller.

Part of the Division of University Outreach at Northern Illinois University in Dekalb, ICEE has eight Centers for Economic Education at universities across Illinois. They provide professional development programs for K-12 teachers, curriculum consulting, and student programs to enhance economic understanding.

ICEE assists schools to integrate the teaching of economics and personal finance across the curriculum, preparing students to meet Illinois Learning Standards. On a local level, funding has provided support for economic and financial education through programs such as The Stock Market Game™ program and the Economic Challenge, as well as teacher workshops.

The opportunity for students to gain life skills in saving and investing will provide a basis for becoming effective participants in our economy. IHC's long-term commitment to economic and financial literacy education has helped thousands of Illinois students leave school as knowledgeable and effective consumers, investors and voters in our society.
